Tableware from Japan

An authorized dealer of Kaneaki Sakai Pottery, a pottery with over 100 years of history, SAY36 specializes in the production and sale of ceramic Japanese tableware including plates, saucers, bowls and cups. From standard ceramic shuki (rice wine cup) to custom-made kozara (small saucers) and chawan (bowls), let us assist you in discovering the most becoming tableware for your place of serving Japanese delicacies. Choose from a broad range of colours, shapes and designs, or completely customize with the adding of your company logo for total branding and promotion.

Minoyaki

Minoyaki, sometimes referred to as mino ware in English, is a traditional form of pottery with roots deriving from the clay-rich lands of Mino Province some 1300 years ago. Today, however, the area now covers the southern part of what is now known as Gifu Prefecture, home to the distinguished pottery towns of Toki and Tajimi. Once considered an art to be admired by feudal lords who controlled the country at the time, it is said that minoyaki gained its status during the upsurge of the popularity in the tea ceremony during the Momoyama Period. Today, minoyaki retains its popularity being the mainstay for tableware served in restaurants and hotels throughout the country.

Kaneaki Sakai Pottery

Over 100 years old, Kaneaki Sakai Pottery is located in the famed pottery town of Toki, Gifu Prefecture, an area boasting the largest production of ceramic pottery in the country. Sitting only a few yards from the 400-year old Motoyashiki Kiln, Kaneaki Sakai is famed for being a major supplier of Japanese ceramic tableware to a myriad of restaurants and hotels across Japan.
